

Verizon Notice of Customer Dispute Page 1 of 2

Verizon is committed to customer satisfaction. If you have an issue regarding your service that cannot be resolved with our customer service representatives, you may choose to either arbitrate or mediate the issue. You can also communicate any issues you may have with your Verizon service with the Better Business Bureau (“BBB”), or federal, state, or local government agencies, and if the law allows, they can seek relief against Verizon on your behalf.

Please use this form to provide notice to Verizon only if you intend to seek mediation or arbitration. Please complete this form in its entirety and keep a copy for your records. A Verizon representative will respond to you within 30 days of receiving this form.

Please check the appropriate box below to indicate whether you would like to participate in the Verizon mediation program or arbitrate your dispute with the American Arbitration Association (“AAA”):

: Voluntary Mediation. In Verizon’s mediation program, we will assign an employee who is not directly involved in the dispute to help both sides reach an agreement. This program is entirely voluntary, and you are not bound by the mediator’s proposal unless you agree with its terms. Participating in mediation does not waive any rights you may have to seek other ways to resolve your dispute, including arbitration, if the mediation is unsuccessful.

: Arbitration. Arbitration is an alternative dispute resolution process in which a neutral third person (one or more arbitrators) evaluates the position of each party to the dispute and renders a decision.. Once the arbitrator renders a decision, it normally is final and binding on the participating parties. You must send Verizon a notice of the dispute in writing at least 30 days in advance of initiating the arbitration. Follow the directions on this form in order to provide Verizon proper notice. Even if you complete this form, you must contact the AAA to initiate the arbitration. You can get procedures, rules and fee information from the AAA (www.adr.org).
