Review the "Description of the Information to be Released" section before completing.
✓ You should only check one of the three boxes listed.

- ✓ If someone routinely assists you with your health care, for example, husband, wife, son or daughter, you may want to give that person access to all your information. To do this check the second box in this section and initial any/all applicable areas in the "Notes" section.
- ✓ Check the "Specific Information" box if an individual is assisting you in resolving a particular issue such as an appeal, and initial any/all applicable areas in the "Notes" section.

You can also allow the authorization to remain in effect until you revoke it in writing, or indicate that the authorization will expire on a specific date or at the conclusion of an event, such as an appeal.
- ☐ You or your personal representative (such as a power of attorney or guardian) must sign the authorization. If a personal representative signs the authorization, a copy of the legal documents showing you have authority to act on the member's behalf must be submitted with the authorization.
